

Saying No to Mail Contracts

I spent a year or two returning CRA's mail, by just writing on the envelop, "Return to Sender for Fraud" or "Return to Sender". Because it was an assumed contract if I kept it. Sometimes I let the mail man take it back, or just collected a 5 or so and stuffed them in an envelope and sent it back. They never did anything else other than send me statements I assume, as I never opened them either. When they sent me a letter from the local office with a different color or style of envelope, I would opened those, because they were actually trying to correspond with their person slave. This allowed me address the harassment they were doing too me and not too their slave, and thus correcting them as there was actually someone to write back too, who might be in a position to stop the harassment. In the end it took two letters too the CRA Winnipeg Taxation Office to settle the matter. The first was generally sent in to whom ever it concerned. They wrote back from a division in there with a general letter saying that I was welcome to my opinion, but I was wrong in doing what I was doing. I then wrote back to the person who sent that letter, which is in appendix IV of my book, and that stopped CRA. Since then over a year now, they have not sent me one letter or anything. I assume that my balances are zeroed out and they are following my instructions not to bother me about it. Also I always returned their original letter too them and wrote on the letter, "I do not wish to contract with you." The actual contract is the envelope I later found out, so send that back too.

Here is an article that talks about how important it is to say no to offers of contract via the mail.

What is not discussed is the fact that we are not a person. It is not a living man or woman created by God that they are asking to contract with it is the person. Thus because the person is within the confines of a slave organization called the Government, the Slave has no rights and they may continue to harass you. Once you make it clear that you do not exist in their world and your rights and freedom come from God and not their Phoney God called the Government, they tend to back off. There is no silver bullet except persistence and clarity of who you are. Cops are who want to talk with you, really simply just want to contract with you. By complying with their wishes to come down to the Police station to talk you are allowing them to contract with your person. Simply tell the Police Officer you do not wish Joinder or to contract with them, good bye. If they insist on talking with you do not give them your name or allow them make use of any name upon you, just simply correct them, that this concerns John Doe, not me a man or woman created by God. They need to attach a name and birth date too you to get a contract. Sometimes they will just use name for the interim part of their arrest procedure. They have no authority to enforce law or adjudicate law upon the earth, so do not enter their world of fiction.
